Alma Mater

On Manassas' Western border
Clear against the sky
Proudly stands our Alma Mater
As the years go by.

Forward ever be our watchword
Conquer and prevail!
Hail to thee, our Alma Mater,
M. H. S! All Hail!

Cherished by thy sons and daughters
Memories sweet shall throng
'Round our hearts, O Alma Mater,
As we sing thy song.

The 1950 Hi-Jacket

Published by the Students of
OSBOURN HIGH SCHOOL
Manassas, Virginia

Foreword

We who are about to meet the greatest challenge in history—the second half of the Twentieth Century—have herein assembled the persons, places, things, and memories which we trust always to associate with our high school days.

We Dedicate

To Mrs. Norman T. McManaway, one whose life is devoted to the guidance of boys and girls, the 1949-1950 HI-JACKET is affectionately dedicated.

Mrs. McManaway was born in Manassas, educated in the Manassas Institute, and later in the University of Virginia and the Johns Hopkins University. She returned to teach at our own high school.

Her influence as a member of the faculty of Osbourn High School, and the Board of Visitors of the College of William and Mary, has inspired countless young persons in their educational pursuits.

We Honor

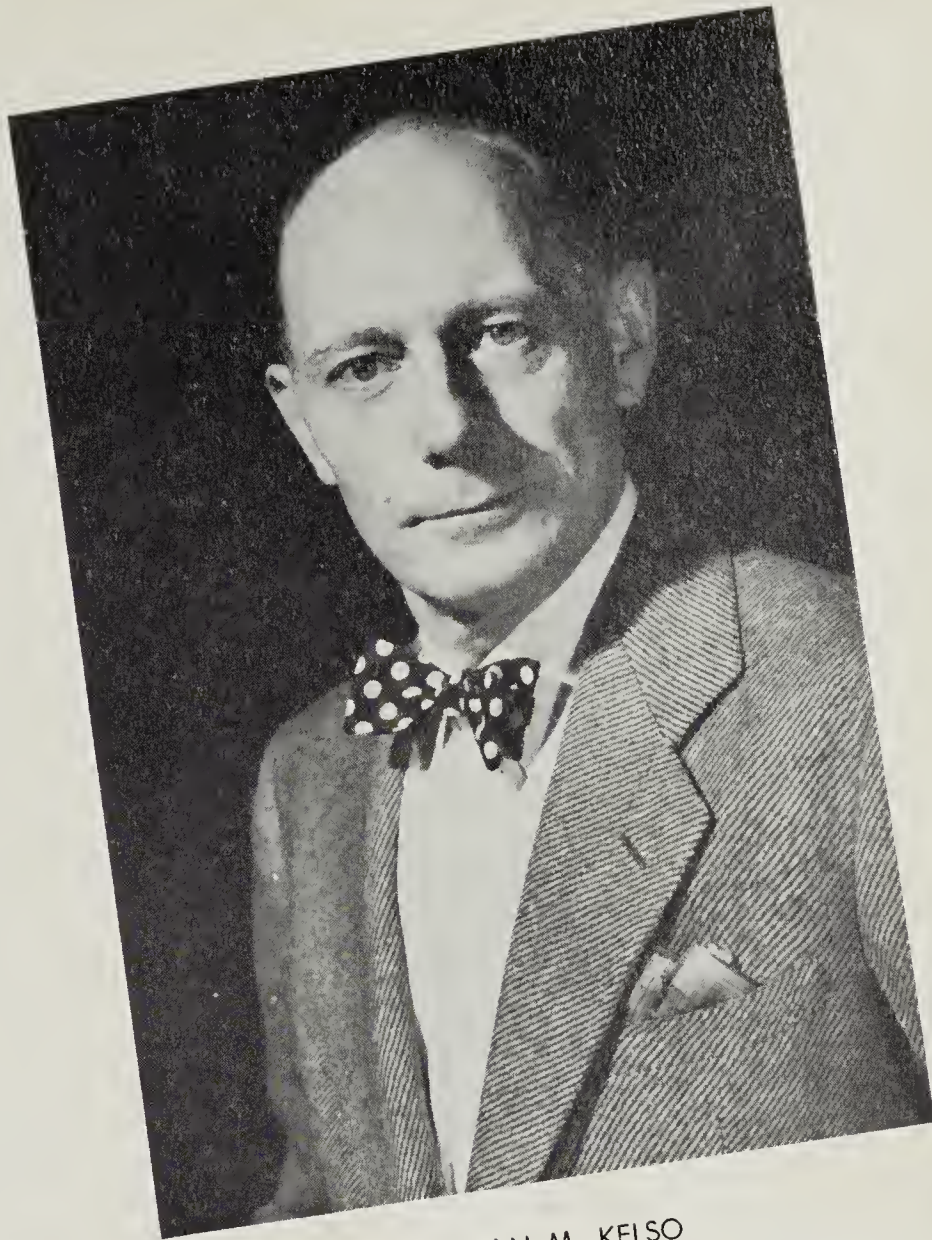

We honor Mrs. Margaret Guy, Secretary-Extraordinary, who has been always the lady with the helping hand and one whom we feel proud to call our friend.

Although we have pestered her for years to issue excuses for this and that, she has always been pleasant to us. We will always remember her busily at work—but never too busy to smile and to have time to resolve our momentous problems.

Administration

His glance can reduce the most wayward student, his smile engender complete admiration.

The Senior Class

Just a few years ago, we the Senior Class of 1950 entered Osbourn High School. Frightening experience, entering high school. Vague rumors of foreign languages, and of things called geometry, chemistry, and trig reached us by way of our more learned friends and neighbors. We were a little scared, but very proud. "I'm a freshman," we casually told our admiring younger friends. Somehow our class endured the trials of Rat Week, irregular verbs in Latin class, and algebraic equations. Then, suddenly, the year was gone, and our Senior idols had departed. A delightful summer passed, as summers must, and we returned to Osbourn, Sophomores.

As sophomores we took a greater part in school activities. Our classmates served in the Senate, or as S. C. A. and club officials; we joined clubs and played on intra-mural and school teams. We knew the upper-classmen and our teachers better, but felt a little left out during Rat Week and the Prom. Another Senior Class graduated, another summer sped by, and when September came, we were Juniors.

Our names were seen more often in Gussie; the select few among us made the Honor Society; our classes were harder; occasionally we inspired looks of Freshman awe; we worked like mad on the Prom; our classmates made the team in sports; we got our school rings at long last. All this and much more we associate with our Junior year.

For the Five-Year Senior, the year before graduation was in many ways the best, and certainly the strangest in high school. At the Prom, he was technically a Junior, yet he went to the Senior Banquet, to various Senior parties, and took part in other Senior activities with the knowledge that he would be back the next year. Then his classmates graduated in 1949. A summer of friends discussing colleges and jobs followed, and he entered his Senior year.

Dignified Seniors. It was hard to believe that only a year was left. Then before we knew it, mid-term came, and only half a year remained. Already we had attended our last Christmas assembly. The Seniors on the football team had played their last game for Osbourn. Then the time flew until Easter, and after Easter, it flew even faster.

Now it is time to paste our last entries into our memory books along with the Prom tickets and mementoes of other years. It is not easy to end an association built up over many years. The finest time of our lives we will have had at Osbourn. We will remember it. And with the conceit evident in Senior Classes everywhere, we want our Alma Mater to remember us.

Student Cooperative Association

The Student Cooperative Association is the self-governing organization through which the students can plan and carry out school activities. It has its own officers, as well as two governing bodies, the Senate and the Council. The Senate, which is composed of three Seniors, two Juniors, and one Sophomore, and the Council, which is composed of the heads of the home rooms, clubs, publications, and committees, work together in governing the student body.

After a strongly contested election in the spring of 1949, Jesse Reid became the president of the Student Cooperative Association.

Outstanding among the achievements of this organization this year was the Homecoming Celebration, which was held for the first time. It is hoped that it will become an annual affair.

Regular monthly meetings were held, and the Ministerial Association of Prince William County furnished the Student Cooperative Association with a guest speaker for each assembly.

County Federation Senate meetings were held at Nokesville and Occoquan. The County Federation of the Student Cooperative Associations met in April, with Osbourn High School as host.

It has been a year of accomplishments for our student government. Its fine record was achieved by the cooperation of the officers of the Student Cooperative Association, the faculty, and the student members of the organization.

Assembly Committee

Chairman-----
Gem Parler

Sponsors-----
Miss Faulconer, Mrs. Helms
Mr. Lee, Miss Haskins, and
Mr. North

The Assembly Committee has arranged a number of successful assemblies this year, some amusing, some inspirational, and all enjoyable. They have provided an outstanding variety of programs for our Friday assemblies. Something new this year was the excellent seating arrangement installed by this committee.

Extra Curricular Activities Committee

Chairman-----
Nancy Gilley

Sponsors-----
Mr. North, Mr. Lee
and Miss Faulconer

The Extra Curricular Activities Committee is a group of boys and girls who plan outside activities for the students, such as the radio dances. Perhaps the most enjoyed of all the dances given through this committee was the "Homecoming Dance," given for the first time this year.

After a harassed year — worrying over money, layout, copy, deadlines and the dozens of other problems that confront a newspaper staff, the last copy of the Yellow Jacket has been sold, and the staff is ready for a well-earned three months' rest. Although the price of each paper had to be set at a nickel, the Yellow Jackets went as fast as they had in previous years when they were given out free. It has been a successful year for the Yellow Jacket in every way.

Technical School

Established in 1944 by the State Board of Education to provide technical training for high school students in Virginia, particularly Northern Virginia, the Manassas Technical School is fulfilling its purpose by offering classes in: Automobile Mechanics, Bricklaying, Carpentry, Woodworking, Cosmetology, Drafting, Electricity, Machine Shop, Office Practice, Shorthand, Typewriting, Practical Nursing, Radio, Welding, Sheet Metal, and Refrigeration.

Academic work is offered through Osbourn High School; consequently, many of our students divide their time, half and half, between the two schools. Credits earned at the Technical School or at Osbourn may be transferred to a student's local high school and applied toward graduation.

It doesn't take long for "Tech" students to get from a class to the Snack Bar. The moment the "Five Minute Break" bell rings, this popular eating place is swamped with customers.

In this picture two Technical School boys are working on the paneling of this station wagon, in the Woodworking Shop.

"Most spirited group of boys I have ever coached," said Coach Leo of the 1949 Yellow Jackets at the close of the football season. That praise was certainly earned by Osborn's team.

The coaching staff too, earned congratulations for the fine job it did with the squad, which outscored, outpassed, and outrushed its season opposition. A hard-hitting, but clean, brand of football was played by the Blue and Gold; its sportsmanship was excellent.

Captain Bill Thomasson, who had won the Lions' Club Trophy for the outstanding line performance of the year twice before, repeated in 1949.

Many veterans from last year's squad returned for action this year. The Osbourn schedule was limited this year to include only District II, Class B, high schools. For this reason, many teams were played more than once during the season. Although the Hi-Jacket goes to press too early to receive the final scores of the basketball season, the squad appears to be heading for a successful season.

In School

Bacon and eggs, toast and coffee, then run for that school bus like mad. The ride from home to Osbourn is not exactly transportation by Cadillac, but it gets you there, through Buckhall's mud or Catharpin's dusty roads.

You arrive in school. It's cold; your classmates are shivering about the radiators. A hasty look at yourself in the closet mirror, and a detailed account to your best friend of your activities since last night's phone call, then you migrate to the library, where the radiators are really working this morning! The Yellow Jacket editor appears at the library door, but cunningly you hide behind your newspaper. It's too cold to attend any meetings this morning.

Getting a little bored with the news of the day, you amble towards the doorway, and nonchalantly regard the passers-by. Seated on the auditorium chairs, you see several of your friends hastily absorbing the contents of their English books. "Must be a test today," you conclude, but with the non-concern of someone who is confident he can not learn any appreciable amount of English in the fifteen remaining minutes of Activities Period, you return to the library, and to your newspaper.

Outside, the Glee Club is practicing for the graduation ceremonies—which leads you to a few minutes of daydreaming as you apparently stare intently at the light switch.

Just as you arrive at the front page news of the Richmond Times Dispatch, the bell rings, and as if a master control had stuck a pin into everyone in the library at the same time, people jump up, chairs are pushed aside, books are scrambled together, and the halls are filled with students rushing to class. The effect is that of a sensational bargain sale in a large department store.

The last bell rings, as you burst into class, but you seat yourself hastily and assume an "I've been here all the time" expression. Somehow, chemistry seems extremely dull this morning; you decide to buy some paper. Miss Smith is rather dubious about it, and after a great deal of discussion as to the importance of not buying paper during class periods, you decide to stop by the Honor Society Store after the next bell.

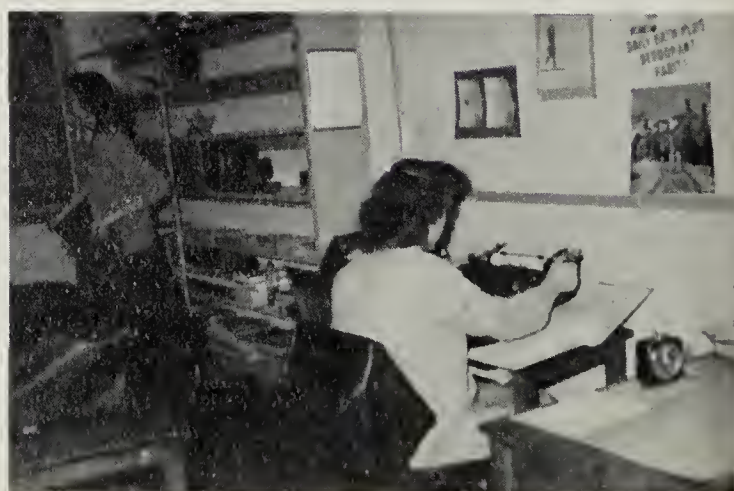

Classes change again and again—an “A” on your physics test, an unspeakable grade in algebra, and a scornful glance at your English test by Mr. Lilly. “Ah, c’est la guerre,” you reflect, calling to mind a very inappropriate French phrase, but the only one you can think of at the moment.

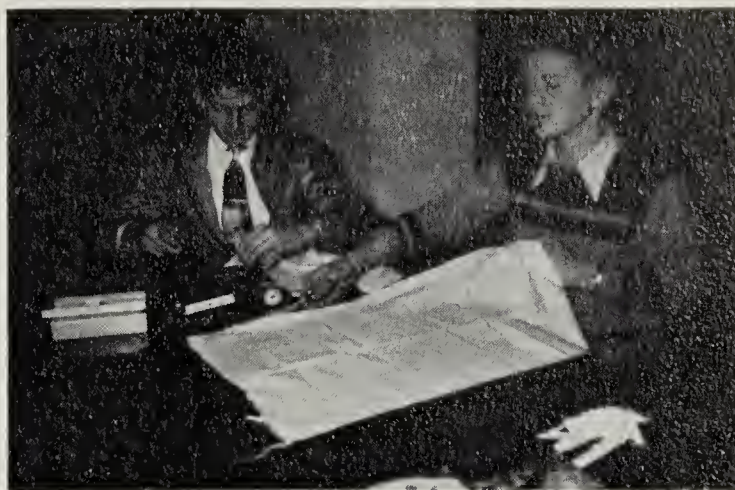

At last the lunch bell rings. If Miss Nelson was not watching you, one might say you almost ran to the lunch room. You don’t like the tomato juice—but those raisin squares!

All too soon, the bell rings again for classes, and as quickly as you can hang up your coat, you are seated at the typewriter, typing the heading for a ten-minute timed writing. “Only twenty errors this time,” you muse.

The afternoon does not go as quickly as the morning. The nearer it gets to 3:30, the slower the minutes go by. The minute hand on your watch creeps along until it is barely moving. Rrrring! The final bell. The teachers look happy, you look happy, and everybody looks happy.

"Would you mind washing the boards, please?" says your home-room teacher sweetly just as you step out of the door. "Oh, well, that's education," and you go out to the water fountain to fill the pan. But the moment this lowly task is over, you leave before you can be inveigled into straightening the shades.

With shouts and smiling faces, the students pour out of the doors. It's good to be going home.

Out Of School

Not everyone goes home, at least not right away. After all, first you must go to "Cockes" to compare notes on the past day with your friends over a "cherry coke." Then of course there's afternoon practice depending on the season.

If you earn your own money, then there's your job waiting for you. It may be in the grocery store, in the drug store, or in an office. Some have their own private baby-sitting business.

For many, "after school" is a time of leisure. You can ride around and visit all your friends, and admire their television sets, or play canasta. Then too, you can go to the movies in the evening with your best beau or girl, or feed on banana splits at the Milk Bar.

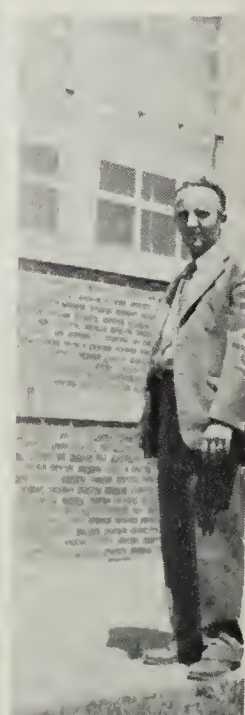

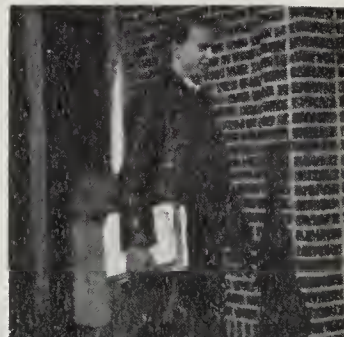

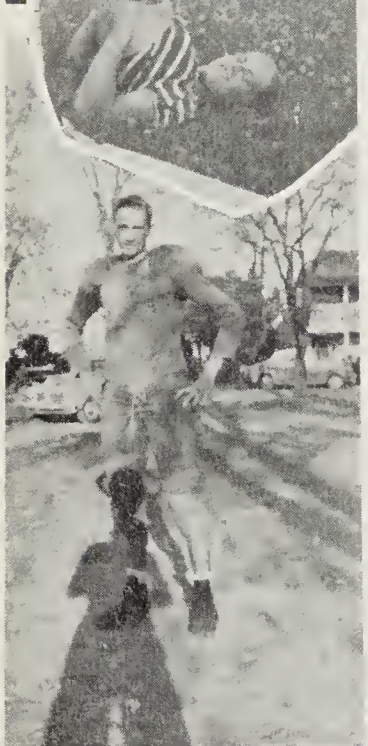

When you do go home, there's the table to set, or outdoor work to do, and it doesn't seem long before supper is on the table.

The dishes are done and put away, and you've settled yourself by the radio with your algebra book, hoping to do twenty problems and follow the adventures of the "Fat Man" all at the same time.

This method of study failing, you go upstairs and get ready for bed. By the time you've settled yourself comfortably, and have begun on your algebra, you find yourself growing sleepier, and sleepier—"Oh, well, I'll do it tomorrow in Activities Period," you say, knowing that tomorrow will find you reading the Richmond Times Dispatch. Thus clearing your conscience, you turn out the lights and fall sound asleep.
